Glass curtain walls refer to housing glass or metal panels made from lightweight aluminum-framed facades. They are wind-resistant materials that are used as a part of a building envelop or consist of a part of the wall system. Glass curtain walls are found in standard prefabricated systems and customized wall units in larger sizing, depending on the requirement of the customer. They provide a viable glazing solution to both commercial and residential applications by offering a sleek and modern look and allowing natural light to enter the building. In recent years, glass curtain walls have gained traction as they are constructed and designed to prevent air and water filtration and protect the building structure from wind and forces due to earthquakes and other vibrations.

Glass Curtain Wall Market Trends:

The global glass curtain wall market is primarily driven by rising investments in building and redevelopment activities. Glass curtain walls are also widely used across storefronts and shopfront windows in the retail sector. Moreover, the rising awareness about using energy-efficient construction facilities and the growing preference for green building materials has increased the demand for glass curtain walls. Furthermore, the leading manufacturers are engaged in research and development (R&D) activities to introduce innovative glass curtain wall variants that support massive glass sizes and complex geometries. Moreover, extensive investments in smart cities, increasing disposable incomes and rapid urbanization are some of the other factors facilitating the market growth.
