Abstracts

The global gluten-free oats market size reached US$ 287.6 Million in 2022. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 586.2 Million by 2028, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 12.8% during 2023-2028.

Oats are considered to be an excellent source of fiber and are consumed in various forms such as whole oats, oat groats, steel-cut oats, rolled oats, instant oats, oat flour, oat bran, etc. Oats are naturally considered to be gluten-free and can be suitable for people with celiac disease or people suffering from gluten-intolerance. However, they can be easily contaminated with gluten, because they may have been grown in fields near wheat and other gluten-containing crops such as barley and rye. They may also get contaminated while processing in the same facility that also processes gluten-containing crops.

The market is primarily driven by the growing prevalence of celiac disease as well as lifestyle-related diseases. For people suffering from celiac disease, a strict gluten-free diet is the only lifestyle choice. With the increasing prevalence of the celiac disease, especially in developed countries in North America and Europe, the market demand has been witnessing significant growth. Apart from this, a portion of the population, both in the developed as well as the developing economies, are voluntarily shifting toward gluten-free diets as a part of healthy lifestyle choices. Since gluten-free oats are rich in essential vitamins, fiber, minerals and antioxidant plant compounds, the incorporation of the same in breakfast cereals, bakery and snack items has strongly contributed to the market growth globally. Moreover, gluten-free oats have low calorific value and glycemic index, as a result, they are preferred by individuals who wish to lose weight. In response to the growing demand, the market players are also focusing on bringing new variants and creating a diverse product range.
