Mortuary equipment is used for ensuring proper handling and storage of cadavers for an extended period. It is generally utilized in morgues and hospitals, where dead bodies are stored for autopsies, preservation or educational and research purposes. Mortuary equipment is also used to delay the decomposition of the cadavers, transport the bodies to the mortuary and to ensure an ergonomic and hygienic environment for surgeons as well as the hospital staff while handling the bodies. Nowadays, several types of equipment, such as mortuary cabinets, macroscopy tables, cremation ovens and embalming workstations, are available in the market, which are used to shift, move, store and dissect dead the bodies.

One of the major factors driving the market is the high mortality rate, along with the high number of unclaimed bodies in morgues. Apart from this, growing investments and rapid advancements in the healthcare infrastructure, especially in the private sector, have provided hospitals with improved access to the latest tools, which in turn has provided a positive thrust to the growth of the market. Moreover, technological advancements and automation have made mortuary operations easier and more convenient. Owing to this, the leading manufacturers are introducing a wide range of automated mortuary equipment, such as pedestal autopsy tables and carts, which allow increased workflow efficiency during postmortem dissections. They have also designed cadaver lifts with multifaceted designs and performance ability that help in decreasing the procedural timings.
