Abstracts

The global non-dairy creamer market size reached US$ 1.7 Billion in 2023. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 2.7 Billion by 2032, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 5% during 2024-2032. Increasing demand for vegan and lactose-free food products, changing dietary habits, and the rising trend of convenience foods represent some of the key factors driving the market.

Non-dairy creamers are a popular alternative to traditional creamers that contain no lactose or dairy-based ingredients. They are made from hydrogenated vegetable oils, corn syrup solids, and other additives that give them a creamy texture and taste. They are commonly used in coffee, tea, and other hot beverages, as well as in cooking and baking. One of the main benefits of non-dairy creamer is that it is suitable for people with lactose intolerance or dairy allergies. Additionally, they are lower in calories and fat than traditional creamers, making them a healthier option for weight management. Currently, they are available in powdered, liquid, and flavored varieties. Powdered creamers are the most common and are often available in a variety of flavors, such as vanilla and hazelnut.

Non-Dairy Creamer Market Trends:

The global non-dairy creamer market is being driven by various factors, including the increasing demand for vegan and lactose-free food products, changing dietary habits, and the rising trend of convenience foods. Additionally, the growing adoption of non-dairy creamers in various applications, such as bakery, confectionery, and beverages to provide flavor, texture, and aroma like dairy creamers, is bolstering the market growth. Moreover, the surging awareness regarding the health benefits associated with the consumption of plant-based products is providing an impetus to the market growth. Furthermore, the advent of innovative product formulations and flavors, expanding distribution channels, and the increasing availability of non-dairy creamers in different packaging formats are contributing to the market growth.
