Advertising is a means of communication involved in promoting services, products or ideas to potential buyers. It is generally aired or printed on mediums such as television, radio, print, digital and cinema. Advertising helps in launching new products, expanding the market, increasing sales and notifying consumers. As a result, it is widely used by brands from different industries to build an image and attain a higher market share.

At present, North America represents one of the largest markets for advertising owing to the investments in online advertising.
