Abstracts

The global one-off chopsticks market size reached US$ 18.1 Billion in 2022. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 26.85 Billion by 2028, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 5.30% during 2023-2028.

One-off chopsticks refer to an equally leveled pair of sticks that are held in one hand between thumb and fingers as traditional kitchen cutlery to eat various dishes. They are manufactured from diverse hues and materials, including bamboo, aspens, and wood, as they delineate distinctive implications. One-off chopsticks help improve memory, are beneficial to learn or refine distinct attributes, such as painting, coordination, or character printing, upturn finger dexterity, and lower the food glycemic index. Apart from this, one-off chopsticks are cost-effective, biodegradable, and compostable; therefore, they are gaining immense traction as dining utensils. At present, they are available in varying materials, designs, and style variations, including geometric designs.

One-off Chopsticks Market Trends:

The increasing need for high-quality kitchen utensils at an affordable price has intensified the widespread adoption of one-off chopsticks across various quick-service restaurants (QSRs) and fast-food chains, which is primarily driving the market growth. This is further influenced by the rising disposable incomes and the shifting preference toward Asian cuisines that require chopsticks. In line with this, the rising environmental concerns and the implementation of anti-deforestation regulations by numerous governments are further supplementing the product demand across the globe. As compared to conventional cutleries, one-off chopsticks are composed of bamboo rather than plastics or stainless steel, making them eco-friendly and easy to dispose of. Additionally, the escalating consumer awareness regarding the several benefits of one-off wood chopsticks, including water resistance and durability, is supporting the market growth. Apart from this, the considerable expansion in the food and beverage (F&B) sector, strategic collaborations amongst key players to launch innovative product variants, and their availability across diverse online and offline platforms are positively augmenting the market growth.
