Blood glucose monitoring devices, also known as blood glucose meters or glucometers, are essential tools that play a vital role in monitoring and managing blood glucose levels in individuals with diabetes. They comprise a meter and lancets for obtaining a blood sample, and test strips for analyzing the blood sample. They are user-friendly and portable and allow individuals to maintain improved control over their health. They help in detecting both low and high blood sugar levels while reducing the risk of severe complications. They enable patients and healthcare professionals to make informed decisions about insulin dosage, diet, and lifestyle adjustments. They offer enhanced convenience that encourages patients to monitor their blood sugar regularly, leading to improved adherence to monitoring routines. Besides this, they assist in reducing the frequency of hospital visits and the need for emergency care. As they aid in improving the quality of life of individuals suffering from diabetes and preventing or delaying diabetes-related complications, such as cardiovascular diseases, kidney problems, and neuropathy, the demand for blood glucose monitoring devices is rising in South Korea.
