Abstracts

The global specialty insurance market size reached US$ 86.6 Billion in 2022. Looking forward, IMARC Group expects the market to reach US$ 140.6 Billion by 2028, exhibiting a growth rate (CAGR) of 8.1% during 2023-2028.

Specialty insurance is designed specifically for businesses that need unusual coverage. It covers high-risk holdings or assets, which are not covered by conventional insurance policies. Besides this, it also offers protection against lawsuits under a specialty policy, known as errors and omissions (E&O), to help an organization recover financially. As a result, it is adopted by businesses from different industry verticals, such as healthcare, construction, and energy. Presently, key players are offering art, entertainment, political risk and credit, livestock and aquaculture, and marine, aviation and transport (MAT) insurances globally.

Specialty Insurance Market Trends:

Specialty insurance provides flexibility in the duration, coverage, and conditions of the policy. It also safeguards businesses from commercial obligations, negligence claims, and other potential threats that are not covered by conventional business insurance plans. This represents one of the key factors bolstering the growth of the market. Moreover, numerous insurers, brokers, and policyholders are nowadays relying on specialized expertise to offer specialty coverages that aid in meeting the requirements of enterprises with unique risk profiles. This, coupled with the expansion of businesses around the world, is positively influencing the market. Apart from this, there is a rise in natural disasters, human-caused catastrophes, and sudden or gradual property damages in the real estate industry, which in turn, is catalyzing the demand for specialty insurance worldwide. Furthermore, leading players are adopting innovative digital solutions for extending their operations and offering better services to end users. In addition, they are investing in technologies, such as blockchain, artificial intelligence (AI), and the internet of things (IoT) that assist in facilitating loss prediction and prevention, risk monitoring, and simplifying claims processing. These advancements are expected to facilitate the growth of the market.
