Abstracts

SDI market is an emerging market in ICT sector. Increasing adoption of mobile, cloud, big data analytics are some of the factors supporting the SDI market growth. SDI is a combination of software-defined compute, software-defined storage, and software-defined networking. The aim of this technology is to reduce cost, increase the business agility, and improve management efficiency by delivering IT services on demand. SDI is the evolution of the data centre, integrating cloud, and computing technologies to build and manage the resources. This will enable the companies to become service oriented and more efficient.

The increasing demand for IT solutions from the business, incessantly rising demand for cloud, and mobility-based services are driving the market. The global SDI market is expected to grow at a CAGR of 24.6% for the period 2016–2022.

The SDI market is analysed based on four segments, namely solutions, services, verticals, and regions.

The SDI market is analysed by three major solutions – Software Defined Storage, Software Defined Compute and Software Defined Networking. The SDC solution is expected to contribute more than 40% of the market share followed by SDS for SDI
