Abstracts

The Europe Canned Legumes Market would witness market growth of 5.9% CAGR during the forecast period (2020-2026).

The legume family of plants consists of pulses that are then dried seed of legumes. The word pulse comes from the Latin word, pulse, which means the seeds that can be made into a thick soup. Chickpeas, beans (including butter beans, haricot (navy) beans, cannellini beans, red kidney beans, adzuki beans, black-eyed beans, and soybeans), peas, lentils, lupins are well-known dried legumes. Legumes are available in a wide range of shapes, sizes, and colors, and can be consumed in several forms, such as split, ground or dried, canned, cooked, or frozen whole legumes.

In the past few years, companies have been adopting better photos of beans and pulses on containers to enhance the appearance of canned legumes. Several European producers are promoting products by incorporating local heritage or local beans into their portfolio. This strategy is expected to help them enter the local food trend and thereby increase their potential. In addition, the shift in consumer preference toward BPA-free packaging is increasing demand toward canned legumes.

Europe dominated the regional segment in the canned legumes market. The U.K., Germany, and France are the key markets in the region. In addition, nations such as the Netherlands, Denmark, and Romania offer a wide range of opportunities for canned legumes. Growing consumer preference for plant-based alternatives to animal proteins has been driving the market in Europe. Recently, processed kidney beans have gained significant prominence in the region.
