Abstracts

Deception technology falls into a category of security tools and techniques used to prevent damage that can be caused by someone who has gained access to a network. The technology uses decoys to manipulate the hacker and works towards delaying or preventing hackers from digging deeper into the network. Deception technology products are used to mimic genuine IT assets throughout the network. The decoys use either a real or emulated operating system (OS) and tricks the hackers by misleading them all the way. Attackers are lured into scanning or attacking a decoy, and eventually the system notifies a special dedicated server called an engagement server or a deception server.

The deception technology is primarily designed to identify inside-the-network threats and their lateral movements Alerts are event-driven and automatically supported by forensics which can be analysed with other log data from the organization’s SIEM system when there is a need. Advanced deception systems also are capable of opening communication with the attacker’s command and control (C&C) server to identify the methods used by the attackers and the tools used.

The report highlights the adoption of Deception Technology, globally. Based on the Component, the Global Deception Technology Market is segmented into Solutions and Services segment. Based on the Category, the services market is bifurcated into Professional Services and Managed Services segment. The Professional Services Market Segment is segmented into Consulting, Training & Education, Design and System Integration and Support and Maintenance sub segments. Based on the Deception Stack, the market is segmented into Application Security, Data Security, Endpoint Security and Network Security.

The study also bifurcates the market according to the deployment mode as Cloud and On-premise segments. Based on the End User Organization size, the study segments
