The Global Enterprise Video Market size is expected to reach $28.5 billion by 2026, rising at a market growth of 9.7% CAGR during the forecast period. Enterprise video platform can be considered as a communication and entertainment hub for partners, vendors, workers, stakeholders and outside public. Enterprise video assists in successful communication for the companies. Video on the enterprise is for restricted individuals unlike social media platforms like YouTube. Enterprise video has a wide scope of application in Corporate Communications and Training & Development purposes.

Enterprise video market is facing massive demand for more effective solutions because of the developing popularity of on-demand video services for internal communication. Top organizations, for example, Microsoft and IBM are focusing on giving high-quality and proficient enterprise video answers for their customers. Developing companies and an expansion in demand for on-demand solutions are anticipated to fuel this market.

However, the significant expense of installation and the requirement for specialized help are the key components that may hamper the development of this market.

In business conditions, employees focus on set aside time for learning while at the same time prioritizing daily tasks and overbooked schedules, in this manner expanding the demand for on-demand videos for learning. Through on-request videos employees get detailed data recorded by mentors, executives, and associates, which can be accessed universally. Besides, different organizations have stressed enterprise video platforms for external activities including sales, marketing, broadcasting of public events, and training of clients and stakeholders. Likewise, there has been an expanded demand for the combination of video content into a company's innovation platforms, for example, enterprise learning management systems, customer relationship management, marketing automation system, and content management system, among others. These components have affected the development of the market in a positive manner.

The outbreak of COVID-19 has caused rise in the number of individuals staying inside that has resulted into an expanded requirement for enterprise coordinated software. The developing trend of remote working and collaborative methodology has caused expanded demand for solutions, for example, video conferencing and content management. Moreover, since April 2020, numerous organizations, for example, Google LLC and Zoom Video Communications, Inc. have emphasized the provision of video conferencing services on the basis of freemium. For example, in April 2020, Google LLC announced that it had opened its Google Meet videoconferencing services to all the customers. This service was before accessible just for enterprise and education users through the G Suite. Downloads for video conferencing and business applications kept on expanding in April and recorded in excess of 70 million installations as of April 12, 2020.
