Abstracts

The Global Meal Replacement Products Market is expected to reach $24.8 billion by 2025, growing at a CAGR of 6.9% during 2019 -2025. Meal replacement products are available across the market in forms of bars or brinks which help to reduce the burden of meal preparation. It contains the same vitamins and minerals as solid food, along with the mass. The most interesting part of meal replacements is that there is no weight loss. It just balances the body's nutrient content. Besides the bodybuilders, the daily workers and hectic scheduled people often enjoy this staple diet replacement.

As a result of increasing awareness of the benefits of meal replacement diets, most European countries are also actively contributing to the market share. People in countries such as Spain consume powdered meal replacement products to meet their fitness goals because these products are low in calories and high in protein, fiber, fatty acids, vitamins, minerals, and complex carbohydrates.

A healthy eating habit can be a real challenge for a few days, even for dietitians and patients. Travel, tight schedules, and unforeseen situations can make a well-balanced meal or snack of nutritious foods almost impossible to consume. That's when most people rely on meal replacement products— calorie-controlled, prepackaged foods like bars and drinks — that provide a substitute for regular meals or snacks. Meal replacement foods also play an important role in weight management programs and metabolic medicine in addition to their comfort.

Meal replacement products can be stored easily and have a longer shelf life. Most of these products are available as bars or ready-to-drink shakes, which makes them easy to grab and consume on the go. The powdered form is the most popular product type among fitness enthusiasts. To inculcate healthier dietary habits among their clients, most gyms promote meal replacement products. With the growing utility of e-commerce as a marketing tool, suppliers of meal replacement products are expected to release their products to broaden their market size in their in-house online portals.

The vast network of global manufacturers for offline distribution is driven by the sale of meal replacement products is by offline channels. Since manufacturers have control over how and where their brand is placed in a grocery store, during the forecast period, this segment is expected to hold the leading market share. Most gym owners are also selling major meal replacement products in gyms, which is expected to increase sales offline.

The ready-to-drink segment is projected to grow at a rapid growth rate from 2019 to 2025. It is expected that the increasing popularity of bottled energy drinks will also boost the meal replacement drinks industry. Increasing consumer preference for ready-to-drink food is enticing packaging, digital marketing, and celebrity endorsements.

The meal replacement market is highly fragmented and competitive with the existence of several global players like Abbott Nutrition, Kellogg, Herbalife, and Unilever. A surge in health consciousness, combined with the prevalence of diseases like obesity and diabetes, is projected to spur innovation. Manufacturers are focused on the introduction of new products with different nutritional qualities to target younger customers. Digital advertising and celebrity endorsements are some of the major trends observed in the market.
