The Global Men Skincare Products Market size is expected to reach $16.6 billion by 2026, rising at a market growth of 8.5% CAGR during the forecast period. Living in the information era, everybody, especially the younger generation, is increasingly inclined to self-care and groom. The perception of the benefits of self-care by a cleaner, safer and natural products is on the rise, empowered with much more access to information than ever. Today's men find it easier to accept and trust products that are free of harmful ingredients such as parabens, phthalates, heavy metals, propylene glycol, than their predecessors. With e-commerce taking mainstream of these goods, natural is readily accessible everywhere that further stimulates demand and breaks barriers to inhibition. The global need for skincare creates a healthy demand for skincare products for men. due to the extended routine of high-income male consumers, especially baby boomers, to grooming. Men's skincare products are now gaining popularity in Asian countries, armed with even more exposure to knowledge than ever. As a result, Asia Pacific manufacturers are leveraging increasing consumer affluence and booming e-commerce to enter the mainstream.
