Abstracts

The Global Moringa Ingredients Market size is expected to reach $120.3 Million by 2026, rising at a market growth of 11.4% CAGR during the forecast period. Moringa oleifera is a fast-growing tree of the Moringaceae family which is native to the Indian subcontinent. Moringa, drumstick tree, horseradish tree, and ben oil tree or benzolive trees are common names for this. For its young seed pods and leaves used as vegetables and for traditional herbal medicine, it is primarily cultivated and is also used for water purification. There has been a growing awareness of moringa's nutritional benefits, which has created a global upsurge for the moringa ingredients market. In addition to the classic nutrients like proteins, minerals, and vitamins, moringa also contains several groups of secondary plant metabolites being studied for their positive effects. Moringa also contains glucosinolates, which give it a very sharp taste. Also found in watercress or mustard, these substances are researched for their protective effects. Moringa has also a wide range of flavonoid and phenolic acid group polyphenols.

Polyphenols are the substances that give astringent taste and brown color to the tea. Like tea, moringa gets these polyphenols from its high antioxidant activity. Research indicates antioxidants as an important element in reducing inflammation, stabilizing blood sugar, and reducing oxidative stress. Carotenoids are the third major group of secondary plant metabolites, most common here are lutein and  $\beta$ -carotene. Carotenes are additional antioxidants and promote healthy vision.

Demand for Moringa has been on a perpetual rise, owing to the increasing advocacy of consumers towards a healthy lifestyle. Moringa's proliferated acceptance has been seen in the diet due to its high nutritional value, which aids in the battle against colds, bacteria, diabetes, obesity, and anemia, among other conditions. Every part of the tree — seeds, flowers, pods — is used as food, while stems, roots, and bark are used for the production of medicines that, in turn, make the whole tree usable. Therefore, the global Moringa market is expected to gear towards a remarkable market value.
