The Global Rice Bran Oil Market size is expected to reach $5.6 Million by 2026, rising at a market growth of 4.8% CAGR during the forecast period. Oil derived from the substrate between white rice and paddy husks is known as rice bran oil. It is an edible oil used as an excipient in the food, cosmetics, and pharmaceutical industries. Rice bran oil is preferred by most consumers due to its antioxidant and low cholesterol properties.

Rice bran oil is produced in three different components: gamma oryzanol, tocopherols, and tocotrienols. These essential components are important antioxidants that provide not only higher nutraceutical value but also a wide range of health benefits, such as improving the nervous system, preventing stomach problems, lowering cholesterol, minimizing cancer risk, and increasing immunity.

Asia is currently the largest producing region. Asia is also the main rice area. The main producers are India, China, Japan, and Thailand. India is the largest region of consumption in the country. The Chinese industry for consumption has not yet been fully established, so there is a huge potential market. Japan has a long history of research and development of rice bran oil. All manufacturers in the world are committed to improving production technology. In recent years, some Chinese manufacturers have almost been able to catch up with the world's leading technology.

Abundant availability of raw materials in the form of rice, particularly in Asian countries, is likely to result in a stable price trend for the rice bran oil market over the forecast period. Production is mainly concentrated in countries such as India, China, Japan, Thailand, and Vietnam. The ICRBO (International Council of Rice Bran Oil) was established to develop a uniform scientific standard and focus on value-added products.

Based on Application, the market is segmented into Food & Beverage, Nutraceutical, Animal feed and Other Applications. Based on Distribution Channel, the market is segmented into Offline and Online.
