Effective communication is considered as an essential need of every organizations. These days, communicating with co-workers for execution of any new policy or declaration of any changes and taking feedbacks turns out to be necessary to build the productivity of the organizations. Efficient coordination between the worldwide center and a regional center plays crucial role when organization is in process of development and Enterprise Video system causes the work force to essentially speak with one another without making any physical presence.

The demand of video interfaces in enterprise communication has expanded significantly in the past few years. Enterprise video innovation enhances efficiency of organizational communication through measures, for example, on-demand video, and adaptability in remote working conditions. Enterprise video innovation also includes collaborative strategies in the functioning of the company. These components are expanding the adoption of this innovation, hence giving possibilities to development. Also, the advancement in enterprise video innovation, for example, superior video codec, web based real time communication, captioning, indexing and transcoding and aggregation are anticipated to surge the demand of enterprise video during the forecast period.

The advancement of 4G and 5G technology that utilizes Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) innovation is giving growth opportunities to organizations in emerged economies, for example, the U.S.. To profit by these opportunities, market players, for example, Microsoft Corporation and Cisco Systems, Inc. are underlining on the improvement of video conferencing frameworks that naturally routes call over the VoIP network. For example, in June 2018, Cisco Systems, Inc. introduced their Cisco Webex Edge Connect, that utilizes Cisco Systems, Inc's, Unified Communications Manager, which automatically routes call over the VoIP network. However, security issues with enterprise video, for example, leakages of data and weakness of privacy are hindering the development of the market.
