Abstracts

The North America Security Policy Management Market would witness market growth of 8.7% CAGR during the forecast period (2019-2025).

The aim of a security policy, however, is to provide more control and transparency in system settings and user activity, and that function will only be accomplished if the security policy is managed effectively. Solutions that streamline security policy management are the most effective ways to keep policy up-to-date and rapidly identify and correct policy exceptions.

Customer Edge Switching (CES) architecture is provided to meet these demands. It recommends that the agent of the Internet user in the network provider should have prior information about the anticipated user traffic to mitigate maximum exploits and allow only expected communication between hosts. CES implements communication security policies for each user or device that acts as the agent of the user. The policy defines the traffic expected by the machine with fine granularity. The policies are generated as automatically as necessary, but the user can also modify them. Stored policies should obey the mobile user and it will be performed on the Customer Edge Switch function implementing network edge node to prevent all unwanted visitors from joining the mobile network.
