Abstracts

Ireland infection control market is projected to grow at a CAGR of 6.88% to over the forecast period of 2019 to 2025. Different end-user industries particularly the food and beverage are increasingly concerned in order to cater to the demands of convenience foods and processed foods by the consumer, as they are getting increasingly busier in their lives and have lesser leisure time. This is encouraging the end-users to use sanitary techniques to avoid the inclusion of bacteria. In addition, the number of advanced healthcare facilities is also increasing on account of growing health related concerns in the country. Thus, these factors are the major driving factors for the infection control market growth.

In addition, there has been an increase in the proportion of geriatric population over the past few years that are prone to life threatening diseases and thus require faster and effective treatment procedures to treat the diseases without the possibility of risking the chances of contracting the infection again. This is being done by the increase in the use of sterilization methods such as heat sterilization and contract sterilization, and thereby it is acting as a factor that is leading to a surge in the market growth over the forecast period.

The importance of the use of disinfectants in order to mitigate the risk of contracting infections.

Every industry including healthcare facilities, chemical industry, food, and beverage industry makes the use of the essential component, called disinfectants. These disinfectants are alcohol-based with alcohol levels as high as 90%, so they are able to kill the dangerous bacteria and viruses effectively, and thereby results in hampering the chances of diseases spreading. Disinfectants are expected to hold a significant market share and grow at a steady pace over the forecast period, which is attributable to the fact that there are increasing investments by the market players in the form of advanced product offerings to cater to the diverse industry regulations and guidelines. In condition, there are increasing investments in the R&D of better infection control solutions.

Increasing investments in the R&D of the solutions in the chemical industry

The chemical industry is one the major industry that caters to a wide variety of applications in different end-use applications such as automotive chemicals, food sealing chemicals, food preserving chemicals, so, due to its widespread use expert-level care has to be taken while the manufacture, and the storing of these chemicals such as proper disinfection and sterilization. These steps are necessary so as to ensure that there is no residue material or bacteria trace in the chemical equipment such as beakers, test tubes, and conical flasks among others as their presence can result in alteration of the composition of the chemical and can pose health hazards. In addition, the increasing investments in the R&D of the solutions to cater to the chemical industry are also contributing to the market share of this segment.
