Abstracts

The report requires updating with new data and is sent in 48 hours after order is placed.

In this report, LP Information studies the present scenario (with the base year being 2017) and the growth prospects of global Less than Truckload market for 2018-2023. Less-than-truckload (LTL) is a shipping service for relatively small loads or freight. Less-than-truckload services are offered by many large, national parcel services as well as specialized logistics providers. These services can accommodate the shipping needs of countless businesses that need to move goods frequently and in smaller batches. Less-than-truckload shippers offer economies of scale so that freight costs of individual shippers are minimized.

Less-than-truckload services have gained increased importance in today's economy. With the inexorable rise of e-commerce, quick shipments of products to customers are imperative for companies competing for sales. This means that their products must be inventoried in warehouses or distribution centers close to customers at all times. Often, a company will not wait until a wholesaler is running low on product inventory so that it can ship a full truckload of replenishment. Instead, it will more frequently ship less-than-truckload to mitigate the risk of potential loss of sales from lack of inventory for its distant customers. The shipping costs of its goods may be incrementally higher and the delivery time may be longer than for a dedicated full truckload, but the trade-off is more dependable inventory availability.

Over the next five years, LPI(LP Information) projects that Less than Truckload will register a xx% CAGR in terms of revenue, reach US$ xx million by 2023, from US$ xx million in 2017.
