The 4-axis automated dispensing robot is an automated device used for precise dispensing of adhesive or other fluid materials. It adds a rotational axis to the traditional three axes (X, Y, Z axes), enabling complex spatial movements through the coordination of these four axes. By precisely controlling the movement of each axis through the control system, the dispensing head can be accurately positioned at any location in three-dimensional space and can rotate around a specific axis, thereby achieving more flexible and varied dispensing paths and angles.
