Abstracts

The global Acetyl Peroxide market size is predicted to grow from US$ 34.43 million in 2025 to US$ 47.76 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 4.9% from 2026 to 2032.

In 2024, global Acetyl peroxide production reached approximately 1,200 tons , with an average global market price of around US$ 28,000 per ton. Acetyl peroxide is an organic peroxide compound with the formula (CH?COO)?, consisting of two acetyl groups linked by a peroxide bond. It is a colorless to pale liquid that is highly unstable and extremely sensitive to heat, friction, and shock, making it a strong oxidizing agent and a powerful initiator for radical polymerizations. Due to its instability and explosive nature, it is rarely used directly in laboratories or industry; instead, safer peroxides are preferred. When handled, it must be kept at very low temperatures under strict safety controls, as it can decompose violently, releasing heat, gases, and acetic acid.

The market for acetyl peroxide is primarily driven by its role as a powerful radical initiator in the polymer and plastics industry, where it is used in the production of styrene, acrylates, and vinyl-based polymers. Its strong oxidizing and acetylating properties also support niche applications in specialty chemical synthesis, pharmaceuticals, and agrochemicals. Demand is further supported by the broader growth of the organic peroxides market, particularly in initiators and crosslinking agents. Although its extreme instability limits large-scale use and encourages substitution with safer alternatives such as benzoyl peroxide or dicumyl peroxide, acetyl peroxide remains valuable in specific processes that require strong reactivity at lower initiation temperatures, keeping it relevant for specialized industrial and research applications.
