Agentic analytics software uses autonomous AI agents to analyze data, generate insights, and trigger actions without direct user input. These platforms go beyond traditional business intelligence or augmented analytics by enabling agents to reason through complex tasks, adapt based on feedback, and operate based on defined goals or constraints. Predictive analytics tools are different from agentic analytics platforms as they forecast future outcomes based on historical data. Agentic analytics takes a more advanced, autonomous approach. These platforms use AI agents not only to predict but also to interpret data, reason through multi-step tasks, explain their logic, and take contextual actions. Unlike predictive tools that require human intervention to analyze and act, agentic systems are self-directed, enabling continuous, insight-to-action workflows with minimal user input.
