Abstracts

The global Animal Health Consulting Service market size is predicted to grow from US$ 2065 million in 2025 to US$ 3083 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.9% from 2026 to 2032.

To address the problems of lagging animal disease diagnosis, insufficient preventive measures, and a lack of scientific basis for feeding management in traditional animal husbandry, animal health consulting services emerged. Since their inception in the late 20th century, the field of animal husbandry and veterinary technical services has developed significantly. Currently, animal health consulting services have evolved into a comprehensive service encompassing disease diagnosis and treatment guidance, nutrition and feed assessment, breeding planning, biosecurity system construction, and animal behavioral health consulting. These services are widely used in livestock and poultry farms, companion animal hospitals, zoos, and wildlife conservation organizations, comprehensively improving animal health and livestock production efficiency.

The growth of the animal health consulting service market is deeply intertwined with the pet economy and the upgrading of the livestock industry. Enterprises need to focus on intelligent, precise, and service-oriented approaches, breaking through international brand monopolies through technological innovation, supply chain integration, and policy coordination, while seizing opportunities in domestic substitution, niche markets, and policy regulation to achieve high-quality development.
