The APU pump refers to the pump in the auxiliary power unit (APU), which is used to operate the auxiliary power unit. An auxiliary power unit is a power unit that is independent of the main engine and is usually installed at the rear of the aircraft. It is used to provide auxiliary functions such as electricity, pneumatic pressure and hydraulic pressure, such as power supply on the ground, starting the main engine, providing pressure and power to the aircraft system, etc. . APU pumps are usually used to transport lubricating oil, fuel or other liquids to ensure the normal operation of the auxiliary power unit. These pumps can be hydraulic pumps, fuel pumps or lubricating oil pumps, and their function is to deliver the corresponding liquid to the APU to meet the lubrication, fuel supply and other requirements required for its operation.

The global APU Pump market size is projected to grow from US$ 1093 million in 2024 to US$ 1530 million in 2030; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.8% from 2024 to 2030.
