Architecture Consulting Service refers to professional advisory and technical consulting services provided for building, urban, commercial, residential, public facility, and infrastructure projects. These services cover concept planning, architectural scheme evaluation, feasibility study, space planning, building code review, sustainability strategy, BIM consulting, design optimization, cost coordination, permitting support, and construction-stage advisory. The service helps project owners, developers, governments, contractors, and institutions improve design quality, functional efficiency, regulatory compliance, construction feasibility, environmental performance, and long-term asset value before and during project execution. The industrial chain of Architecture Consulting Service includes upstream design software, BIM tools, visualization platforms, building codes, material databases, sustainability standards, engineering data, surveying information, and professional architects or consultants. The midstream includes project briefing, feasibility analysis, concept consulting, architectural planning, technical review, green building consulting, digital modeling, cost coordination, risk assessment, and design management. Downstream applications include residential buildings, commercial complexes, offices, hotels, hospitals, schools, public buildings, industrial facilities, transport hubs, urban renewal projects, and mixed-use developments. Related services include permitting support, construction advisory, project coordination, design audits, energy analysis, and lifecycle optimization.
