A baby walker harness is a safety device designed to prevent infants from falling or wandering away while using a baby walker. It typically consists of adjustable straps and harnesses that secure the baby snugly in the walker, preventing them from falling out or tipping over. The harness usually attaches to the baby walker itself and wraps around the infant's torso, providing additional support and stability as they move around in the walker. This helps to minimize the risk of accidents and injuries while allowing the baby to explore and develop their motor skills in a controlled environment. Baby walker harnesses are considered an important safety feature for traditional baby walkers, which have raised concerns regarding their potential risks to infant safety and development.
