The barite recovery system (Barite Recovery System) is a specialized equipment or process designed to efficiently recover barite (sulfate) from industrial waste, drilling fluids, or by-products of mineral processing. This system typically integrates a variety of advanced separation and purification technologies, such as centrifugal separation, screening, magnetic separation, flotation, and chemical treatment, aiming to maximize the recovery rate and purity of barite. Through these methods, the barite recovery system not only reduces the demand for natural resource extraction but also significantly lowers the environmental impact of industrial activities. At the same time, it provides high-quality barite reutilization for industries such as oil drilling and mineral processing, achieving resource recycling and economic benefits improvement.
