The global Beauty Butters market size is predicted to grow from US$ 1948 million in 2025 to US$ 2472 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 3.5% from 2026 to 2032.

Beauty butters refer to natural, plant-based fats that are commonly used in skincare and beauty products. These butters are derived from various nuts and seeds and are known for their moisturizing, nourishing, and emollient properties. Beauty butters are often used in formulations for creams, lotions, balms, and other cosmetic products to promote skin hydration, elasticity, and overall skin health.

Wilmar is a well-known brand that offers a range of skincare and haircare products, including those featuring shea butter. Shea butter is a popular beauty butter known for its moisturizing properties.

Natural and Clean Beauty:

There was a growing preference for natural and clean beauty products, leading to increased demand for skincare items formulated with beauty butters. Consumers were seeking products with minimal synthetic ingredients.

Diversity in Beauty Butters:

Beauty brands were incorporating a variety of beauty butters into their formulations, offering consumers a choice of different butters such as shea butter, cocoa butter, mango butter, and others, each with unique properties.

Sustainable and Ethical Sourcing:

There was an increasing focus on sustainability and ethical sourcing in the beauty industry. Brands were expected to source beauty butters responsibly, ensuring fair trade practices and environmentally friendly production.

DIY Beauty Trends:

Some consumers were engaging in do-it-yourself (DIY) beauty routines, creating their skincare products at home. Beauty butters were popular ingredients in DIY formulations, providing a natural and customizable approach to skincare.

Anti-Aging and Skin Nourishment:

Beauty butters were often promoted for their anti-aging properties and ability to nourish and hydrate the skin. Products with shea butter, cocoa butter, and other beauty butters were positioned as effective solutions for maintaining skin health.

Innovation in Formulations:

Beauty brands were innovating in product formulations, combining beauty butters with other active ingredients to address specific skincare concerns, such as dryness, sensitivity, or uneven skin tone.
