Beauveria bassiana is a fungus that grows naturally in soils throughout the world and acts as a parasite on various arthropod species, causing white muscardine disease; it thus belongs to the entomopathogenic fungi. It is being used as a biological insecticide to control a number of pests such as termites, thrips, whiteflies, aphids and different beetles. Its use in the control of bedbugs and malaria-transmitting mosquitos is under investigation.

The Beauveria bassiana insecticide market is driven by the increasing demand for sustainable and environmentally friendly pest control solutions. Beauveria bassiana is a natural fungus that effectively targets and eliminates various insect pests while posing minimal harm to the environment and non-target species. However, a significant challenge in this market is the need for broader adoption and awareness among farmers and pest control professionals. Educating users about its benefits and integrating it into pest management practices is essential. Additionally, regulatory approvals and standardization of formulations can be complex, requiring manufacturers to navigate rigorous processes to ensure the safety and effectiveness of their products.
