Biodegradable disinfectant wipes are cleaning products that combine disinfectant functionality with environmental protection features. They are primarily based on traditional disinfectant wet wipes but use materials that can be decomposed by microorganisms as the substrate for the wipes (such as biodegradable non-woven fabric). Additionally, the disinfectants and other ingredients contained in these wipes can gradually decompose through biological action under natural environmental conditions, ultimately converting into harmless substances such as carbon dioxide, water, and biomass. While effectively killing bacteria, viruses, and other microorganisms, these wipes reduce long-term environmental pollution and ecological damage.
