Black soldier fly pet food is a novel type of pet food that uses black soldier fly larvae or prepupae as the main protein source. As a resource insect recommended by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the black soldier fly larvae are rich in high-quality protein, essential amino acids, and medium-chain fatty acids, with an amino acid composition superior to soybean meal. It also contains bioactive components such as antimicrobial peptides and chitin. This type of food has been approved by regulations as a pet protein ingredient. Its high digestibility and palatability can meet the nutritional needs of pets. Furthermore, because it is raised using organic waste such as kitchen waste and distiller's grains, it also possesses resource recycling and environmental protection attributes, belonging to a sustainable and innovative category of pet food.

The black soldier fly pet food market has broad prospects, aligning with the trends of sustainable consumption and pet health. In terms of the market, the global insect protein market is projected to reach US$496 million by 2025. Due to its high protein content and low allergenicity, the black soldier fly is becoming a key raw material to replace traditional meat protein. On the consumer side, the products emphasize hypoallergenic and gut-friendly functions, making them suitable for sensitive pets. They also boast significant environmental benefits, with water and land consumption for breeding being only 1/10 of that of animal husbandry, and carbon emissions reduced by 90%, attracting green consumers. With policy and capital support, the industry chain continues to improve, and in the future, through technological upgrades and overseas expansion, it is expected to become one of the mainstream categories of pet food.
