Bulk carrier chartering refers to specialized shipping services involving the matching, leasing, operation, and contract management of dry bulk vessel capacity. At its core, it connects shipowners, intermediate owners/operators, cargo owners, traders, and charterers to arrange the maritime transport of dry bulk commodities such as iron ore, coal, grain, bauxite, steel products, cement, fertilizers, wood chips, and mineral products. It is not fundamentally about 'selling' or 'building' ships, but rather trading the right to use vessel capacity. Key revenue sources include chartering commissions, brokerage fees, operational spreads, COA (Contract of Affreightment) management income, voyage management service fees, and services related to FFA (Forward Freight Agreement) derivatives. Primary application scenarios include transporting iron ore from mines to steel mills, supplying coal from traders to power plants, transoceanic grain transport, shipping bauxite from Guinea or Australia to China, regional distribution of minor bulks (steel, cement, fertilizer), and time charters for commodity traders. Gross profit margins range from approximately 35% to 60%.
