Buttermilk powder or dry buttermilk is derived from liquid buttermilk that is obtained from churning of butter and pasteurized before condensing. Buttermilk powder is produced by spray drying buttermilk and has an excellent solubility performance, strong emulsifying properties, uniform fat content and a rich creamy flavor. By removing excess moisture from buttermilk, microbial growth is prohibited. Buttermilk powder consists of 5% or less moisture (by weight) and 4.5% or more milk fat (by weight). Higher levels of phospholipids in buttermilk powder improves the heat constancy and the creamy flavor of recombined milks and refined dairy products. Improved heat constancy assists in reducing the fouling rate of ultra-heat treated (UHT) milk formulations for recombine UHT milk uses. Functional properties of buttermilk powder includes browning, emulsification, foaming, water binding, and flavor enhancement. The average shelf life of buttermilk powder is 12 months from date of manufacture when stored in dry, ambient conditions away from direct sunlight.

The global Buttermilk Powder market size is projected to grow from US$ million in 2022 to US$ million in 2029; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2023 to 2029.

The major factor driving the global buttermilk market is that it provides longer shelf life due to decreased moisture content. Oxidation can be reduced by keeping a low moisture content and avoiding contact of the powder to elements that encourage oxidation including light and metals such as copper and iron. Longer shelf life is vital for regions with extreme temperatures and poor transport facilities. Reduced transportation and storing costs plays a major role in fuelling the growth of the global buttermilk powder market. The growing demand for dry dairy products is also expected to drive the market for buttermilk powder in the near future. Increasing number of buttermilk powder applications in the animal feed industry is another factor driving the market for buttermilk powder across the globe. Advanced technology and scientific breakthrough will support the growth of the global buttermilk powder market during the forecast period.
