Capital Raising Services refer to credit intermediation and capital allocation solutions provided by financial institutions, quasi-financial institutions, or professional service platforms to meet the funding needs of individuals, businesses, or government entities. Its core function is to efficiently allocate idle social capital to production, consumption, and investment through diverse tools such as credit, equity, leasing, factoring, and trust. This service spans the entire process, from due diligence and asset pricing to risk mitigation, loan disbursement, and post-loan management, relying on credit systems, collateral valuation, and cash flow forecasting for risk pricing. Modern financing services are deeply integrating big data, blockchain, and artificial intelligence technologies, using alternative data such as tax data, invoices, and supply chain tracking to construct credit profiles for micro and small enterprises, achieving instant credit approval and intelligent risk control. It is both the lifeblood of the real economy and a core carrier for the market-based allocation of capital elements, widely serving scenarios such as working capital replenishment, equipment purchase, infrastructure investment, and mergers and acquisitions.

The global Capital Raising Service market exhibits a differentiated pattern: North America's capital deepening, Europe's green leadership, Asia-Pacific's inclusive finance-driven growth, and emerging markets catching up. North America boasts the world's most developed capital markets, with direct financing dominating. Venture capital, high-yield bonds, and asset securitization are highly active, and fintech-enabled instant lending to SMEs has a leading penetration rate. Europe has taken the lead in legislation in green finance and sustainable finance, leading globally in ESG-linked loans, carbon-neutral bonds, and socially responsible investment funds. Cross-border trade finance benefits from the advantages of a single market. Asia-Pacific has become a core growth engine, particularly China, Southeast Asia, and India, which continue to innovate in supply chain finance and digital credit. The deep integration of e-commerce ecosystems and payment infrastructure has spurred an explosion in scenario-based financing. Middle Eastern oil-producing countries are accelerating the transformation of sovereign wealth fund equity investments, while Africa and Latin America rely on mobile money and digital credit to fill gaps in traditional banking services. In terms of technological trends, the world is evolving from collateral-dependent lending to data-driven real-time credit assessment, with open banking and blockchain trade finance becoming new competitive frontiers.
