Chemical Agent Resistant Coating (CARC) is a paint commonly applied to military vehicles to provide protection against chemical and biological weapons. First used in the 1980s, CARC paint is engineered to protect the vehicle from chemical, biological, and nuclear attacks, along with easy decontamination after the attack. The paint is also resistant to damage and removal by decontaminating solutions. Two-component systems (e.g. epoxy or polyester-based) are often employed. Available in a variety of military colors and camouflage schemes, CARC is required on most of the military's combat and support equipment, including ground vehicles, tactical equipment, and aircraft.
