Ceiling Cassette generally refers to ceiling-mounted cassette units, most commonly used in HVAC systems for concealed air conditioning installation. It integrates air outlets, panels, fans, coils, drainage, and control components to provide distributed cooling or heating in indoor spaces.

The industrial chain includes upstream sheet metal, plastic panels, fans, coils, motors, valves, control boards, and insulation materials. Midstream covers casing fabrication, heat exchanger assembly, fan integration, testing, and packaging. Downstream applications include offices, hotels, retail buildings, hospitals, schools, and commercial HVAC projects.

The prosperity of indoor decoration, commercial office and central air-conditioning engineering fuels the demand for ceiling cassettes. The product focuses on compact structure, convenient installation and uniform air outlet performance, adapting to embedded indoor installation scenarios. Appearance simplification and energy-saving air duct optimization become the main upgrading direction.
