Cement-free concrete, also known as alternative cementitious materials or low-carbon concrete, refers to a type of concrete that reduces or eliminates the use of Portland cement, which is a major contributor to carbon emissions during concrete production. Cement-free concrete utilizes alternative binders, such as industrial by-products or supplementary cementing materials, to partially or fully replace Portland cement. These alternative binders can include fly ash, slag, silica fume, or other materials that provide strength and durability to the concrete mix. By reducing the amount of cement or using cement substitutes, cement-free concrete contributes to the goal of reducing carbon footprint in the construction industry.
