The global Cerium Oxide Glass Polish market size is predicted to grow from US$ 422 million in 2025 to US$ 593 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.1% from 2026 to 2032.

Cerium Oxide Glass Polish is a high-purity polishing compound derived from cerium oxide (CeO?), a rare earth oxide widely valued for its hardness and chemical reactivity, used in precision polishing of optical glass, flat-panel displays, lenses, and semiconductor wafers. Its supply chain begins with the mining and refining of bastn?site or monazite ores, where cerium is extracted as part of rare earth separation processes; the cerium oxide is then processed into micron- or nano-sized powders through calcination and milling. These powders are supplied to polishing compound manufacturers, who blend them into slurries or pastes tailored for different glass types and polishing systems, which are then distributed through specialty chemical suppliers and integrated into the production lines of optical, electronics, and automotive glass manufacturers worldwide. The global Cerium Oxide Glass Polish market produces about 28,000 tons per year, backed by an annual capacity of around 36,000 tons. The industry keeps a strong average gross margin of about 37%, with prices ranging from USD 8,500 to 14,000 per ton depending on purity.
