Nicotine addiction is one of the important reasons behind the increasing smoking habits among women. Psychological factors such as tobacco dependency also play a significant role that makes them difficult to stop smoking. For instance, women cite psychological reasons such as smoking as a sign of fashion in society and peer pressure. The social factors include upbringing of children in materially disadvantaged circumstances. These aforementioned factors are making women incline more towards smoking cigars and cigarillos, and to a certain extent, premium cigars. Remarkable cigar consumption among women has been recorded in Sweden.

In Western Europe, nearly 90% of the NORDIC population prefers tobacco /no flavor cigars and cigarillos followed by chocolate and vanilla flavored cigars and cigarillos. Increasing popularity of cigar parlors coupled with the lounge culture in Italy is anticipated to drive the growth of the cigar and cigarillos market in the country. In Switzerland, around 80% of the population uses tobacco/no flavor cigars and cigarillos, followed by fruit and candy flavored products. An increasing female smoking population in countries of Russia and Poland is expected to drive the growth of the Eastern Europe cigar and cigarillos market over the forecast period.
