The global Class Protection Consulting Services market size is predicted to grow from US$ 377 million in 2025 to US$ 600 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 7.0% from 2026 to 2032.

Class Protection Consulting Services refer to professional security service organizations providing comprehensive compliance guidance and technical support for information systems based on relevant national laws and regulations and the Class Protection Standards system. The core of this service lies in helping clients build a protection system that meets the requirements of the corresponding security levels (Level 1 to Level 5) through five prescribed actions: system classification, registration, construction and rectification, level assessment, and supervision and inspection. Consulting work covers specific aspects such as gap analysis, policy document preparation, security technology hardening, and emergency response plan development. Its ultimate goal is to ensure that the client's information system can successfully pass the assessment by authoritative testing organizations and obtain registration certificates, thereby meeting mandatory national compliance requirements, effectively improving overall network security protection capabilities, and avoiding legal and operational risks caused by non-compliance. The costs of Class Protection Consulting Services are primarily driven by human resources costs (security expert salaries), supplemented by assessment cooperation fees, tool procurement, and marketing expenses. Gross profit margins are polarized: standardized, highly competitive basic services have lower margins; while high-end consulting services that provide customized, end-to-end solutions for critical information infrastructure or complex systems, due to high technological barriers, can achieve gross profit margins exceeding 50%.

Class Protection Consulting Services (CPSC) is a cybersecurity compliance service with Chinese characteristics, its development highly concentrated within mainland China. This service originates directly from China's Cybersecurity Law and the Class Protection 2.0 standard; therefore, its market demand, service content, and assessment standards are entirely driven by domestic laws and regulations. In the Chinese market, this industry is highly mature, forming a complete ecosystem from regulatory agencies, professional consulting firms, and testing centers to demanders across various industries, covering key sectors such as government, finance, and energy. In contrast, other regions globally do not have a completely corresponding 'Class Protection' concept, but rather it is scattered across various compliance frameworks, such as the EU's GDPR (Data Protection Regulation), the US NIST framework (Critical Infrastructure Standard), and SOC 2 (Cloud Service Audit). Therefore, international cybersecurity consulting firms only indirectly encounter Class Protection requirements when serving Chinese companies expanding overseas. Overall, Class Protection consulting is an endogenous market shaped solely by domestic policies, with clear market boundaries and difficult for external competitors to penetrate.
