The global Cleanwiper market size is predicted to grow from US$ 1266 million in 2025 to US$ 2146 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.0% from 2026 to 2032.

Dust-free cloth is a special cloth used for cleaning and wiping in clean room environments. It is characterized by low dust particles, low chemical residues, strong water absorption and scrub resistance. It is used in semiconductor, pharmaceutical, biotechnology, medical equipment, optics and other industries. The sales volume in 2024 is about 90,000 tons, the average unit price in 2024 is about US$13,500 per ton, and the annual production capacity of a single line is about 20 million tons. The upstream companies are mainly non-woven fabrics or fiber material manufacturers and chemical cleaning agents and antibacterial agents. The downstream companies are mainly semiconductor factories, pharmaceutical companies, biological laboratories, hospitals and optical manufacturers.

Demand for cleanroom wipes will continue to rise as increasingly stringent cleanroom standards and regulations drive a greater emphasis on contamination control in the electronics and medical industries. Technological innovations, such as lower-dust, more environmentally friendly materials and pre-moistened products, will be key growth drivers. However, challenges remain, including raw material price fluctuations, cost pressures, the burden of production compliance due to increasing environmental standards, and competition from alternative products, such as dry wipes or gas purging, which may reduce reliance on traditional cleanroom wipes.
