The global Clinical Supply Chain Management Service market size is predicted to grow from US$ 4167 million in 2025 to US$ 7176 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.1% from 2026 to 2032.

Clinical Supply Chain Management Service (CLCMS) refers to professional and compliant supply chain solutions provided to pharmaceutical companies, biotechnology companies, and medical device manufacturers throughout the entire lifecycle of clinical trial materials such as drugs, medical devices, and diagnostic reagents. Its core function is to ensure that clinical trial materials arrive at the trial center at the right time and in a compliant state by coordinating the procurement, production, packaging, warehousing, logistics, distribution, recycling, and disposal of materials. Simultaneously, it meets the regulatory requirements of drug regulatory authorities in various countries (such as the FDA and NMPA), possessing the core characteristics of compliance priority, full traceability, customized adaptation, and controllable risk. It is a key support for the efficient advancement of clinical trials.

The globalization of new drug development is driving clinical trials to expand from single-country/regional to multi-center, cross-regional operations, forcing clinical supply chain management services to upgrade towards global collaboration. On one hand, service providers need to build logistics networks covering major clinical trial regions such as North America, Europe, and the Asia-Pacific region, streamlining customs access, drug import qualification approvals, and language and cultural compatibility in different countries to achieve rapid cross-border flow of trial materials. For the clinical trial needs of emerging markets (such as Southeast Asia and Latin America), service providers are accelerating the construction of localized warehousing and distribution nodes to reduce cross-border transportation costs and timeliness risks. On the other hand, regional compliance capabilities are crucial. Different national drug regulatory authorities (such as the FDA, EMA, and NMPA) have varying requirements for packaging labels, temperature control standards, and traceability of clinical trial materials. Service providers need the ability to customize compliance solutions to help pharmaceutical companies meet multi-regional regulatory requirements and avoid trial stagnation due to compliance issues. Furthermore, the resilience of the global supply chain is being emphasized. Service providers are addressing the impact of geopolitical risks, pandemics, and other unforeseen risks on material supply by establishing multi-regional backup warehouses and diversified logistics cooperation systems.
