Abstracts

The global Co-Selling market size is predicted to grow from US$ 16670 million in 2025 to US$ 29320 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.6% from 2026 to 2032.

Co-selling is a collaborative sales strategy in which two or more companies work together to jointly market, promote, and sell products or services to the same customer or market segment. Unlike simple referrals or channel partnerships, co-selling involves shared sales efforts, coordinated account management, and aligned incentives to maximize conversion and customer value.

Gross Margin Analysis

The gross margin in the joint sales industry is generally high, typically ranging from 50% to 70%, but fluctuates depending on the cooperation model and execution depth. For joint sales platforms primarily based on SaaS or technology solutions, gross margins can approach or exceed 65% due to shared sales resources, shared customer acquisition costs, and the application of automated management tools. However, for joint sales models requiring significant human involvement, customized solution delivery, and cross-regional collaboration, labor and management costs account for a higher proportion, resulting in gross margins typically between 50% and 60%. As companies adopt CRM integration, sales process automation, and data analytics tools in joint sales, improved sales efficiency and partner management efficiency have led to a steady upward trend in the overall industry gross margin.

Industry Drivers

The rapid development of the joint sales market is primarily driven by enterprise digital transformation and the demand for sales collaboration. Firstly, B2B companies, when dealing with the sale of complex products and solutions, need to integrate internal and partner expertise to achieve more efficient customer coverage and conversion rates through joint sales. Secondly, the expanding cross-industry and cross-regional partner ecosystem enables companies to quickly enter new markets, reduce customer acquisition costs, and increase customer trust. Simultaneously, the growing market demand for end-to-end solutions, customized services, and high-value customer management is prompting companies to increase their investment in joint sales. Finally, the development of technological tools (such as partner relationship management systems, sales automation platforms, and data analytics tools) further reduces operating costs and improves execution efficiency, becoming a key driver of sustainable growth in the joint sales industry.
