Abstracts

The report requires updating with new data and is sent in 48 hours after order is placed.

A coco coir brick is a compacted block made from the fibrous material found between the outer husk and the actual coconut. It's derived from the byproduct of the coconut industry, primarily the fibers that are removed from the coconut husk. These fibers are then processed, dried, and compressed into a dense, portable brick form.

Coco coir bricks are popular in gardening and horticulture as a sustainable, peat-free growing medium. They are known for their excellent water retention, aeration properties, and resistance to fungal growth, making them beneficial for plant roots. To use coco coir, the brick is typically soaked in water to expand and loosen up, transforming into a loose, fibrous material that can be mixed with soil or used alone to grow plants.

The bricks are lightweight, easy to store, and transport, which contributes to their popularity among urban gardeners and others with limited storage space. Coco coir is also pH neutral, which is advantageous for growing a wide variety of plants, and it is often considered an environmentally friendly alternative to peat moss.

The global Coco Coir Brick market size is projected to grow from US$ million in 2024 to US$ million in 2030; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2024 to 2030.
