The global Coconut Flour market size is predicted to grow from US$ 934 million in 2025 to US$ 1361 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.5% from 2026 to 2032.

Coconut flour is a fine powder product made from coconut meat (dried coconut flakes or coconut butter) through drying (such as spray drying or freeze drying). Before use, it can be dissolved in water to reconstitute into liquid coconut milk or used directly in baking, desserts, flavorings, and functional foods. Coconut flour retains the natural flavor and fat content of coconut, is easy to store, transport, and process, and is a commonly used ingredient in the food industry, catering, and home cooking. In 2025, coconut flour production was approximately 51,852 tons, with a unit price of approximately US$18.42/kg and a gross profit margin of approximately 30.92%.

The global coconut powder market has seen steady growth in recent years, primarily driven by the trend towards plant-based diets, increased health awareness, and demand for natural and functional foods. Coconut powder is widely used in downstream sectors such as beverage preparation, baking, desserts, and dietary supplements. Market opportunities include: 1) rapid growth of instant or easily soluble coconut powder in ready-to-drink beverages and functional drinks; 2) premium market demand for organic, natural, and non-GMO products; and 3) increasing consumer interest in plant-based and natural ingredients in emerging markets. Market challenges and risks include: fluctuations in raw material prices (coconut is affected by seasons and climate), high processing costs, competition from other plant flours (such as oat flour and almond flour), and inconsistencies in product quality and certification standards.
