Coir substrate, also known as coconut coir or coconut fiber substrate, is a natural, renewable growing medium used in horticulture, agriculture, and gardening. It is made from the fibrous husk of coconuts, which is the part of the coconut fruit that surrounds the seed.

To produce coir substrate, the coconut husks are first soaked in water to soften them. Then, the fibers are extracted mechanically or manually. These fibers are then processed into various forms such as coir peat, coir pith, coir chips, or coir blocks.

Coir substrate has become popular as an alternative to traditional growing media like peat moss due to its sustainable and environmentally friendly nature. It is free from harmful chemicals and pathogens, retains moisture well, provides good aeration to plant roots, and is biodegradable.

In horticulture and gardening, coir substrate is used for growing a wide range of plants, including vegetables, fruits, ornamentals, and herbs. It is often used in hydroponic systems, container gardening, seed starting, and as a component in potting mixes.

The global Coir Substrate market size is projected to grow from US$ million in 2024 to US$ million in 2030; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of % from 2024 to 2030.
