The global Commercial Eggs market size is predicted to grow from US$ 62021 million in 2025 to US$ 92443 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 5.8% from 2026 to 2032.

Commercial Eggs refer to egg products through further processing such as frozen, liquid and powder or other value added egg products, in china, the majority of Commercial Eggs are century eggs, marinated eggs, salted eggs, etc. but the liquid and powder egg products grow fast. In 2025, the average price of Commercial Eggs was approximately USD 4,000 per ton, and the industry's average gross margin was around 24%.

The growth of the Commercial Eggs market is mainly driven by food industrialization, chain foodservice expansion, rising consumption of bakery and prepared foods, higher food safety standards and the need for cost and efficiency improvement. Compared with fresh shell eggs, liquid eggs, egg powders and frozen egg products are more suitable for large-scale production lines because they reduce manual egg breaking, lower cross-contamination risks, stabilize protein and emulsification performance, and improve storage, transportation and formulation management. On the demand side, bakery, mayonnaise, sauces, noodles, meat products, nutritional supplements and ready-to-eat breakfast foods are increasing the penetration of egg products. On the supply side, avian influenza, fresh egg price volatility, cold-chain capacity, pasteurization technology and spray-drying capacity expansion are pushing leading companies toward vertical integration, functional ingredients and higher-value egg protein products.
