Abstracts

The global Corporate Halal Certification Services market size is predicted to grow from US$ 555 million in 2025 to US$ 967 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.3% from 2026 to 2032.

Corporate Halal certification is a professional service provided by qualified or accredited certification bodies. It involves auditing aspects such as product ingredients, production processes, processing equipment, storage and transportation, supply chain management, and quality control systems against Sharia requirements and relevant national or regional Halal standards, culminating in the issuance of a Halal certification upon compliance. The service covers sectors including food and beverages, food ingredients, foodservice, cosmetics, personal care, pharmaceuticals, and certain areas of logistics.

The growth of the global Muslim population and the rising demand for Halal products serve as a key driver for the development of Halal certification services for businesses. Meanwhile, the expansion of cross-border trade in sectors such as food, cosmetics, and pharmaceuticals has created an increasing need for export-oriented companies to obtain Halal certifications recognized in their target markets. Major Halal consumer markets—including Indonesia, Malaysia, and the Middle East—are continuously refining their regulations, standards, and certification management systems, prompting companies to shift from voluntary certification toward more standardized compliance management. Furthermore, as international brands and major enterprises in retail, foodservice, and food production increasingly prioritize supply chain transparency and raw material traceability, Halal requirements are extending across the entire value chain—encompassing raw materials, processing, packaging, warehousing, and logistics. The drive for market expansion into regions like Southeast Asia and the Middle East, coupled with heightened consumer interest in product origins and the credibility of certifications, will continue to fuel demand for Halal auditing, certification, renewal, and related compliance services.
