Abstracts

The global Corporate Health Consulting market size is predicted to grow from US$ 1439 million in 2025 to US$ 2496 million in 2032; it is expected to grow at a CAGR of 8.2% from 2026 to 2032.

To address the challenges of fragmented employee health management, rising healthcare costs, and reduced work efficiency due to health issues, corporate health consulting has emerged. Since the gradual formation of corporate health consulting service systems in the early 21st century, the fields of corporate human resource management and health protection have entered a new stage of systematic and professional development. Currently, corporate health consulting has developed into a comprehensive professional service covering multiple dimensions, including mental health support, chronic disease management, occupational protection, and health promotion. It is widely applied in various enterprises, institutions, government agencies, and emerging industry organizations, effectively improving employee health levels, reducing medical expenses, and enhancing organizational resilience.

The corporate health consulting industry is in a golden age of development, with a continuously expanding market size and technological innovation and cross-industry integration driving service model upgrades. Companies need to seize policy opportunities, strengthen technological research and development, deepen insights into user needs, and build a complete service chain of 'prevention-diagnosis-intervention-rehabilitation' to achieve sustainable development. At the same time, they need to be vigilant against risks such as data security and technological substitution, maintaining a competitive advantage through compliant operations and continuous innovation.
